The Asian restaurant in a class of its own enriches the area around the Naschmarkt – in terms of both its cuisine and its appearance. And does so almost around the clock.

The Naschmarkt isn't the only place to bustle in all sorts of dining - so does the surrounding area. The latest hotspot is the ON Marketon Linke Wienzeile. Simon Xie Hong, who is also known in these parts from the TV series "Silent Cooking", serves up Asian cuisine here from the coastal regions of Southern China and Japan. Simon Xie Hong has already proved that extraordinary quality can be expected from the dishes with his two restaurants ON and ChinaBar.

The ON Market has positioned itself as a market restaurant that never sleeps. It opens early in the morning and, besides serving an international breakfast, also offers Asian variants with influences of traditional Chinese medicine. Small, fresh snacks are offered at all times of day and night. The highlights are the authentic South Asian menus, as well as the dishes made with freshwater fish. You can also drop by here in the evening just for a cocktail.

The restaurant is worth a visit not only for the dishes, but also for the impressive ambience. A great tiled floor, colorful textile artworks on the walls and an imposing flower lamp, also made from textiles, make the ON Market a visually spectacular restaurant. And from September 2013, the basement will also be home to a club in the Shanghai style of the 1920s by the name of "Bar ON".
